

My dear Sir

Thank you, for your kindness in sending me your pamphlet. It only proves two things, which no one has known anything of the matter was doubted —
that a sensible edition of Shakespeare was absolutely wanted, and that you were the only person in the world capable
of producing it.

On looking attentively into "The Tempest" the other day, an error struck me that, though it has escaped all other editors, has no doubt occurred to you.

Act IV sc. I. I

Mr. Mian — He wish you grace reunite

Pros. Come with a thought: — I thank you:
and come —

Wish it not to stand thus:

"Mr. Miss — We wish you grace. Present

Mr. I think you — Come, with a thought. 2^d Ariel, come."

Persons would not be there but stand & Mr. Miss
in the middle of his address call to Ariel,
more particularly, as Mr. & him were not then present.

Yours very Truly,

L. Davis Miller.
